This exhibition was curated by Ellen Cassilly and Frank Konhaus and all of the works are drawn from the Cassilhaus Collection. Although none of this work is for sale, we encourage you to support these artists by visiting their websites, attending their exhibitions, and purchasing their work. Most of the works in the exhibition are part of an edition and may be available for purchase from the artists or their galleries. The work in the Lisa McCarty Developer Drawings Exhibition in the Project Gallery is available for purchase. Please feel free to ask if you have questions.

Lisa McCarty
DEVELOPER DRAWINGS

The series Developer Drawings is an experiment to make photographs using only light and the varying developers contained in Polaroid and Impossible Project Instant film. Rather than expose the instant film with a camera, I test the parameters of the materials themselves by using the developer encased in the frame of every print to compose an image. As I manipulate the developer under the plastic skin of the print surface, the existing light triggers reactions which change the color and the texture of the developer and film emulsion below it. Every drawing records a new expression of the photographic material and the agency of light, demonstrating that there is already a latent image inside of each instant film print, waiting to be released.
